Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 21 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine, dry with sunny spells. Cold with brisk winds easing.

Today:
Chilly with sunny spells and cloudier intervals for much of the day. Dry for most, although the odd light shower cannot be completely ruled out. Brisk winds also gradually easing. Cloud then thickening across southern parts later, but staying dry. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:
A cold night, with winds continuing to ease and largely clear skies. A widespread frost is likely, along with the risk of some icy patches. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
A largely fine but cold January day, with some long spells of sunshine and light winds. Likely a little cloudier by the afternoon, but staying dry. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold weekend with sunny spells, although spells of rain, sleet or brief snow possible, with stronger winds. Clear spells overnight, with frost and icy stretches. Fine, dry but cold Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.